WOMEN SHOPLIFTERS HAVE THEIR TERMS COMMUTED TO YEAR

Governor Philipp Reduces Sentence of Three Rockford Women Convicted Here After Investigation.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Feb. 16.—Governor Philipp today commuted the sentences of three women convicted of shoplifting at Rockford, Ill. These women were sentenced by the circuit court of Rock county for shoplifting October 23, 1915, for a term of one year and six months. The governor today commuted the sentence for one year, which makes them eligible for parole on April 23.

Executive clemency was extended because of letters received by Varden Henry Towne of the state penitentiary and because of a special investigation conducted by the governor into the cases of these three prominent society women.

NATIONAL PAY-UP WEEK IS NEXT WEEK

Six Days Set Aside by Entire United States as a Means of Furthering Prosperity.

"National Pay-Up Week" is next week. Merchants all over the country are putting on plans for the event which, during the last few months, has taken the country by storm. Cities and towns in every nook and corner of the United States are following the same identical plans and at the same time are using advertising matter, stamps, posters, advertisements—all doing the exactly same thing at the same time—is one of the strongest features of the campaign and one of the certain reasons for its success.

This national pay-up week is one of the few things the principle of which everybody seems to admit is correct.

Everyone realizes and knows that putting money into circulation helps all.

If the farmer, the carpenter, the mechanic, the doctor, the lawyer, the teacher and everyone else go to the local merchant and pay their accounts during the week of February 21st to 26th, the merchant will turn around and pay his debts to the lawyer and doctor and preacher and farmer and everyone else in fact, and when these various classes pay their debts to one another, prosperity will reign.

And, after all, this is the very thing the entire country is striving for. So it is only reasonable to expect the endorsement and co-operation and support of a movement of this kind when everyone is so directly and vitally interested.

The time is short, but Janesville can more or less realize prosperity through the co-operation during the week of merchant and debtor. Remember the slogan, "National Pay-Up Week," and the dates, Feb. 21-26.

Members of Wisconsin lodge No. 14, I. O. O. F., will meet at the lodge rooms at one o'clock tomorrow afternoon to attend the funeral of Brother Ezra Dillenbeck.

Engine 782 is in the shops for repairs and engine 1492 is out of the shops after a thorough overhauling.

C. W. Starritt has been displaced on runs 691 and the seven o'clock extra. It is expected that he will stay at the shops until he is assigned to another run.

F. W. Bear, an engineer, laid off Sunday and Monday. He was relieved by engineer R. K. Smith.

Jerry Lindley and Leo Murlaugh who took the train from Kaukauno to the chicken business according to the reports from Foreman Wade. They take numerous magazines and spend most of their time reading on how to care for the feather flock.

"Doc" Wade the assistant storekeeper and timekeeper is busy getting out his new time books. This is his semi-monthly job. It comes just twice a month much to the regret of Mr. Wade.

The boys are all wondering why the storekeeper did not get to work the last night. Through an investigation it was found that in returning from his home in Kaukauno he went to sleep on the train and was taken on through Milwaukee and then to Kaukauno. He must have been thinking of picking "pansies" or some other spring flower.

Mr. Manigan of St. Paul representing the ship-out company was at the south Janesville shops yesterday.

P. B. Barsch was at Harvard last week on company business.

The Chicago & North Western Railway has issued a strikingly illustrated poster for use in the anti-trespassing campaign. It is headed: "Do not trespass on railroad tracks or cars," and after citing statistics regarding the number of trespassers, says "this is the only civilized country in the world that does not penalize trespassing on railroad tracks or cars. Why not enact and enforce a law similar to that recommended by the National Association of Railway Commissioners to prevent this slaughter? You or your child may be the next victim." At the top of the poster are shown a number of illustrations of the most common ways in which trespassing accidents occur. There is also shown a funeral caused each year by trespassing accidents, and another illustration shows a large gathering of corpses, beneath which is printed: "You understand that all of the pain and suffering and death that is caused by these injuries would be avoided if trespassing were stopped."

TO CHANGE LIGHTS ON THE EAST SIDE

Since Hundred Power Incandescent Lights Prove a Success Changes On East Side to Be Made.

All arc lights were ordered removed from the east side of Janesville on a sweeping resolution passed by the city commission at its meeting yesterday afternoon, and the Janesville Electric company was directed to place the hundred watt incandescent lights at practically every corner in this district. In the past the city commission has pursued a policy of making a few changes at a time, and now are light to the smaller incandescent lights, but since the smaller lights have proven such a success, a wholesale change was ordered to accomplish the results in a quick manner.

Under the present contract the city obtains five of the hundred power lights to every two arc lights that were removed. Under the old system there was an arc light placed at about every other corner, and the result was that one corner would be overlighted and the other intersection without sufficient light. Now it is the plan to have a light on every corner and an intermediate light where it is needed for the safety and convenience of traffic and pedestrians.

The five incandescent lights use approximately the same amount of electricity, so there will not be a material change in the contract. With the smaller lights a more even distribution is obtained and there is much better service, as the globe lights seldom burn out and need little attention.

Besides ordering the changes the council passed the resolution for the payment of bills and labor expenses for the past two weeks. The total amount, $5,236.95, is the lowest appropriation for the past two years.

P. J. Goodman, superintendent of streets, and C. V. Kerch, city engineer, were in Chicago today attending the concrete and good roads show.

EDGERTON DEFEATS JANESVILLE HIGHS; SCORE IS 16 TO 12

Janesville Outplays Them the Last Half, But Eight Point Lead First Half Proves Too Much.

For the second time this year, Edgerton high school defeated the Janesville high, and this time they turned the trick in the Janesville gymnasium, winning because they gained too big a lead for the J. H. S. in the first half and the final score ended 16 to 12. It was a most exciting battle, both teams playing evenly well until the deciding factor. There was an immense crowd of spectators present at the contest held yesterday afternoon, and about two hundred were cheering "boosters" and the score was continued their winning streak for the title of southern Wisconsin.

The Edgerton team showed superior work over the Janesville high. Their play is composed of a husky aggression of comports, well versed in the game, good and fast passers, fleet on their feet and possessed with just enough luck at baskets to be skilled shooters. They spread out well when the ball was in their hands, and could break quickly and cover when they lost it. Furthermore the team was well supported and backed by a delegation of rooters that was composed of "kids" to the biggest business men of the tobacco city. They came here to win and they did.

The first half there was no comparison between the two teams. Edgerton passed the ball bewilderingly fast, and outplayed the J. H. S. two to one. They got the lead by scoring points before the Janesville players awoke to the fact that they were really playing basketball. Williams and McIntosh, Edgerton's forwards, scored two baskets apiece because the Janesville guards would leave one of them uncovered as both would start to guard one Edgerton player. It was fully ten minutes before the Janesville broke into the score column and was called out when Thompson was injured, and was forced to retire because of a "turned" ankle.

When play was called the J. H. S. took a brace and during the remaining minutes played Edgerton to an even break. Koehler and H. Cushing getting some "work" at goal shooting by the local players during the first half cost them the game. They had fully as many and as easy shots as did Edgerton, but could not ring the ball. Richard Cushing, the star was placed at forward, but his small stature was too much of a handicap, and Koehler was placed at right forward.

The second half, in the second half Janesville had everything their own way until it looked as if they were going to chase the "big" and nose out a victory. They played harder, and played closer basketball, going after the ball instead of attempting to spill their opponents. Richards started the scoring with a long cool and unflinching basket. The high was maintained by this score, the high was maintained by this score, the high was maintained by this score. Three and four men lined up in the middle floor and Edgerton was unable to break through the defense wall to score. The big play was such an attacking game that they had the score 12 to 13, with one point to tie and about four minutes to play. With the immense crowd cheering wildly the two teams fought their hardest, Edgerton on the defense and Janesville striving to put over the winning basket. Clark Edgerton center, broke up the game with a long basket, and clinched the game for Edgerton with a score of 16 to 12 in the last minute of play.

Summary.
Janesville High: Richards, R. R. Cushing and Koehler, H. Cushing, C. Lee, Jr. and Cronin, Jr. Edgerton High: Williams, R. McIntosh, H. Clark, C. Ogden, R. Livack and Thompson, L.

Field Goals: Williams, McIntosh, Richards, Koehler, C. Clark, Ogden, Cushing and Lee, L.

Foul Goals: Williams, 4 out of 7; Cushing, none out of one chance.

Score: First half: Edgerton 12; Janesville 4. Carter.

Between Halves.
Edgerton has a good chance for the championship. The first half has been weighed into a winning basketball aggregation, with but a few faults. They have not been defeated and trimmed McIntosh, Belmont, would not have a chance with them.

The rooting delegation at the game is typical of the spirit of Edgerton in boosting for "they were all there" to the quick.

Edgerton triumphed the Janesville high on their own gym on January 15, by the score of 33 to 15, so there is not much dispute over the results.

Had the second half they would have doubled the score on Edgerton, for during three-quarters of the time, Edgerton players were unable to get an open chance at the goal.

SYNOPSIS

Little Helen Holmes, daughter of General Holmes, railroad man, is rescued from a train wreck by a young man, George Storm, a newspaper reporter. Storm, now a member of the Signal, is a young man of great courage and ability. He is the only one who can save Helen from a life of poverty and degradation. He is the only one who can save her from a life of poverty and degradation. He is the only one who can save her from a life of poverty and degradation.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER IV.

When Helen Holmes took the day key at Signal the little office had already passed from the quiet kind to the remorselessly active kind of those small way stations that drive innocent men mad. Two rival lines maintaining large construction camps and getting all their supplies through Signal station, were engaged in a race to build a mountain cut-off—and a considerable one. Despite all the help Lyons, the overworked agent, could give Helen, she found the tasks of her day about all that her strength would compass.

Nor could Helen, situated as she was, escape occasional office visits from Seagru, whose activity as head of the opposition construction camp was unabated. Going over to the station one day to watch his men unload a shipment of material, he stepped into the office ostensibly to make inquiries—in reality to steal a few minutes with Helen Holmes, whom he found busy, but alone.

Seagru spoke blandly: "I hear you're becoming quite a railroad expert." She made no effort to reply. "Getting really clever at the key, Lyons says." Helen, entering waybills, went on with her writing. "By the way," asked Seagru, evenly, "any word this morning from our steam shovel?"

She looked toward the window—the local freight train had just pulled in. "It may be out there now, on No. 85." Seagru seemed in no haste to investigate, and Helen had almost lost hope of any diversion in that direction, when the office door opened and George Storm walked in.

He was just out of his engine cab, and deliberate and composed as usually, but his eyes, lightens to greet Helen, cooled when he saw Seagru. Storm nodded curtly toward him and was greeted in kind. Then the station engine man turned his attention to Helen, and Seagru was soon made to feel the pangs of being distinctly third in the situation and without an anesthetist.

"And the best of it all is," said Storm at length to Helen, "this is my last run on local freights. I am assigned tonight to the Limited."

Helen lifted her eyebrows in surprise: "Some run they're giving you!"

Seagru took the chance to join sarcastically in: "Right in line for chief of motive power, eh, Storm?"

Storm was not to be disturbed. He only regarded Seagru calmly for a moment. Then he turned good-naturedly to thank Helen. While soldiering agreeably at this task, his fireman intruded on the scene long enough to remind him they were waiting for him to get out. Storm, with an expression of disgust at the interruption, nodded gruffly to the fireman, concluded his talk with Helen and walked out. Helen rose to go out on the platform also. Seagru intervened to distract her attention. It was useless. She must deliver a message, she said, to the conductor, and Seagru, peeved, was left to stay with himself or unwillingly to follow. He followed, but even then it was only to find himself watching Storm's good-byes waved to Helen from the cab. And she saw them, too: nothing escaped her attention.

Rhineland, in charge of the Tidewater line camp, was pushing Seagru closely in the construction race and as the head of a big crew of men imbued with his own spirit was laughing at obstacles that made Seagru's head ache; and with equipment actually somewhat inferior was forging daily ahead of his rival. But the mail now brought him a note from the chairman of the executive committee of his board that almost paralyzed his activities.

"Oceanside. "Dear Rhineland: Our survey party advise that they cannot relocate the pass over the Superstition range. Unless you can furnish a survey of the cut-off pass before the first of our people will withdraw their financial support. BOWERS."

Amos Rhineland, sitting at his dusty and littered desk, stared at the abrupt communication. Bowers was his friend; the executive committee of the board were with him—this he felt assured of. But somewhere influences must be at work against him. He suspected Capelle, still a board member, and a continual intriguer. Capelle was a master worker in underground effects and besides being Seagru's own attorney, was himself heavily interested in opposing enterprises of the Coast line. To throttle Rhineland in the construction effort begun by Helen's own father before his death, was to advance his own interests as well as those of his client. Rhineland's decision as to what must be done to meet this opposition was prompt.

He consulted a timetable, called his foreman, asked for a man to carry his handbags to the station and began changing his clothes for a trip.

Not far away, and at about the same time, Seagru was reading his own mail. It contained this note:

"Unsuccessful report concerning pass submitted. Persuaded backers to withdraw support on the first. This will stop operation on Rhineland's cut-off, as we know he cannot produce survey. CAPELLE."

In Seagru's hut a party of newspaper men from Oceanside were waiting to be taken on an inspection trip over the construction.

"I'm ready for you, boys," said Seagru, in high spirits, to the journalists. "We'll look over the work near here first," he announced, ripping open a box of cigars.

"Hold it, Mr. Seagru," cried a camera man, focussing on the manager. "We want you, first, right there where you are, at your desk. Hold it!"

The picture was taken, a copy promised to Seagru within an hour and the party started out. Had he left his hut two minutes earlier he might have seen Amos Rhineland, followed by Seagru's own Spike with Rhineland's bags, entering the waiting room door of Signal station.

Helen, looking up from her table, perceived Rhineland's anxiety reflected in his manner.

"Bad news, Helen," he said, plunging at once into the unpleasant subject. "I am on my way to Oceanside," he added, when she had read Bowers' note. "The directors meet tonight. Someone is trying to undermine us. But whether I succeed in changing their views or not, I'm going to fight if I have to fight all night."

Helen was too upset to speak for a minute. For her, so much depended on the success of her own road in reaching the mountains with a cut-off first. Rhineland, worried though he was, tried to cheer her up. Spike outside, listening, gathered that Rhineland was on his way to the city. He hung around the platform till the local passenger pulled in, watched Rhineland board it, and, mingling with Seagru's men, walked unobserved over to the latter's camp. He found his boss with the journalists.

"What is it?" demanded Seagru, scenting news in Spike's appearance. "Rhineland has just gone to Oceanside."

Seagru smiled. "Did he get a letter this morning?"

"He did." "Their confab was broken in on by one of the newspaper men who had a print of the photo he had taken of Seagru at his desk. Seagru inspected it with the greatest pleasure. "Fine!" he exclaimed. "Good picture!"

A whimsical idea seized him. He wrote a word or two across the back of the print and recalled Spike. "Take this over to Helen Holmes. Give it to her with my compliments." So saying he turned to the photographer.

Spike's reception at the station was always a chilly one. This time Helen took his message and dismissed him before she opened the envelope. When she saw what Seagru had sent she was angry. Her first impulse was to tear the hateful print in two. Instead, she contemptuously impaled it on a steel file near at hand. A moment later, removing the print to file a message, she looked at the picture again. Her attention was attracted to a paper lying on Seagru's desk. It had been caught by the camera lens. The longer she looked the more carefully her eyes fixed on this object revealed in the photograph. Very curious now, Helen opened a drawer, took from it a reading glass and swilled the contents of Seagru's desk. Her heart almost stopped beating as she realized that her suspicions must be correct. With the aid of the ordinary glass she could plainly see the survey that had been stolen from her father's library.

Helen looked toward Seagru's camp. It was there even now, and it she could recover the precious find it was not too late to save her own interests as well as those of her own good friend, Amos Rhineland. How could she recover it? With fast kindling hatred of its dishonest possessor, a dozen projects for regaining her own flashed across her mind. The more she thought the more impossible it seemed to devise any scheme that could be carried out in time to help Rhineland's fight that night at Oceanside.

But what Helen could not devise herself, was being already devised for her. Following up what Spike—an unconscionable liar—had declared a flattering reception of the picture, Seagru resolved to seize a moment while the going was good to forward himself with Helen. She was studying the telltale print when she heard footsteps and started, looked out. Seagru was coming up the platform. She felt frightened. Could he possibly have realized his blunder and come to demand the return of the picture? She was resolved she would not surrender it in any event. Force, she was hopeless of as a possible aid in her difficulty. Strategem and a woman's weapons alone remained to her.

Her wits rapidly cleared. She opened the photograph. Seagru, sneaking the door, caught her, picture in hand. He walked forward pleased. It was not hard for Helen to counterfeited an embarrassment; nor was it in the least unbecoming to her. To Seagru her look came like a burst of sunshine after many chilling storms.

"What do you think of my construction headquarters?" he laughed. Helen's gaze rested modestly on her table. She seemed to contemplate the picture with a quiet pleasure. Then she looked slowly up at Seagru. "This doesn't show very much of the camp," she drawled the words the very least bit—"you are awfully busy over there, I suppose."

"Never too busy to welcome our friends. Come over sometime."

Had Manager Griffith had waivers on Chie Gandil and had he been in a position to turn him over to one of the National league clubs at once, either the Braves or the Cincinnati Reds would have purchased him for a bundle of cash. Stallings wanted him in preference to Konetchy, and the Cincinnati club, too, would have liked him, but did not want to take any chances on waiting on waivers, for the impression seems to be that the Chicago White Sox will refuse to pass up Gans when waivers are asked on him. Griffith, however, believes that when he gets all the American league managers together he will be able to talk to them and get them to waive unless they want him themselves.

Ray Schalk, White Sox backstop, has been training at his home in Littlefield, Ill. Schalk has taken up hand ball, indoor baseball and basketball for preliminary exercise.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

Who is the most beautiful woman in pictures? Many would have us believe Genevieve Hammer has "the most beautiful face on the screen," which others insist Margaret Gibson is "the most beautiful woman in moving pictures."

While these and others prate on beauty, a real American beauty like Norma Talmadge, a little French doll like Marguerite Clark, a spiritual beauty like Mary Pickford, and an intellectual beauty of the Bessie Barriscale type, to say nothing of countless others, let the public have minds of their own on the subject of womanly beauty.

EVEN VAMPIRES SOMETIMES FAINT.

Theda Bara, starred in "Gold and the Woman," a new production which will be released next month, fainted during the making of one of the scenes in that picture. The scene was that of a raid on the home of a wealthy Mexican landowner. Miss Bara was required to stand still in the middle of a set while bullets were shot past her at the windows in back. The tension proved too great and she collapsed.

WHEN D. W. GRIFFITH EARNED $15 A WEEK.

David W. Griffith, executive and directing head of films, recently entertained Walker Whiteside, his wife and daughter, at the Griffith studios. He was assisted by DeWolf Hopper, an old friend of the actor.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Griffith was playing in Mr. Whiteside's company, in Shakespeare parts, at a salary of $15 per week. Today Griffith is perhaps the most notable motion picture producer in the world.

Walker Whiteside will be recalled as the star of "The Melting Pot," the Russian drama banned by Great Britain.

Ollie Kirby and Martin Sais threaten to exhaust the Los Angeles department stores and modistes. Both players are making elaborate preparations for "The Love Pirates," in which they will divide the title role.

And preparations with an actress mean buying clothes and still more clothes.

Violet Messersmith, the dainty and youthful star, evidently loves trouble.

Amusements

(Notices furnished by the theatres.) AT MYERS THEATRE.

"The Prince of Pilsen" in an entirely new dress and with a company composed of notable players, will be seen at Myers theatre Sunday evening, Feb. 20th. No other musical comedy has quite reached the popularity of this quaint work of Pixley and Luder.

The present company is the only one organized for this season's presentation and is said to have gathered the most brilliant cast for its interpretation of the German dialect stars. It is to play with Hans Wagner, and Edward T. Mora with a fine baritone voice and splendid personality will again sing the Prince.

The selection of the female principals of the cast of the management is said to have been singularly happy. Estella Birney, gifted with a charming stage presence, is to play the role of the French girl, while Helen Fitzpatrick, a dainty and demure Nellie. The whirlwind dancer, Irene Duke, will give an entirely new interpretation of the French girl, while Helen Fitzpatrick, a dainty and demure Nellie.

The chorus, it is said, is to be a most pleasing combination of youth, beauty and vivacity.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

"The Tables Turned." With Miss Emy Wehlen.

A strong plot, plausible situations and many tense moments characterize this feature. The interest in the story is of the kind that holds the eye. Little fault can be found with this picture as a desirable item on a good program.

Emmy Wehlen as Ethel gives a sincerely sympathetic characterization of the part. She is called upon to register all manner of emotion and is equal to every opportunity that presents itself. Her unusually attractive appearance creates added sympathy.

Her screens very well indeed. J. Frank Glendon appears as the husband and adds a decided touch of melodrama to each of his big scenes. Leslie Austin is the friend while others are Mr. Cooper, Cliffe, Jeanette Horton, Edgar L. Davenport and Walter Hitchcock.

With regard to the direction much may be said. The producer has employed the familiar Rolfe method of dissolving closeups and distant into one another. Its commencement dance is most elegant and the cabaret scenes are strikingly gorgeous. The photographic work is practically faultless.

On the whole, the picture is a very good example of what an energetic director, assisted by an appreciative star, can do.

AT THE PRINCESS.

"Her Painted Hero," Tonight's Comedy.

Hale Hamilton, the comic star of "A Pair of Sixes," and "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallington," will be featured in the Princess tonight and tomorrow in the amusing burlesque of stage life entitled "Her Painted Hero."

In the title role will appear Miss Polly Moran of Keystone fame as the young woman who is a victim of the handsome Hamilton's charms and essays a stage career with somewhat disastrous results. Others in the excellent cast are Charles H. Murray and George Summerville as the property man and the bilkposter, both in love with Polly, and Harry Booker as Polly's father. It is important to note that these Sennett-Keystone comedies are released exclusively through the Triangle program, and only at the theater above named can these delightful Keystone be seen.

"The Martyrs of the Alamo," is the feature tonight and Thursday, and is inspired by the thrilling struggle of Texas for independence from the Mexican yoke of the dictator, Santa Anna. Historically correct is the story told by the pictures so skillfully narrated by Griffith. The events leading up to the massacre which inspired the slogan, "Remember the Alamo!" and the quick vengeance taken by the Texans under Sam Houston are portrayed in real fidelity. Houston, David Crockett, Silas, Smith, James Bowie and other heroes of 1836 are presented to the life for Young America to see and be thrilled thereby, and to hasten to the libraries and textbooks for the stirring recital of the struggles of those early pioneers.

A SPLENDID ENTERTAINMENT IS VERDICT OF AUDIENCE.

"That was more than a Glee club concert—it was a splendid entertainment!" was what the stylishly dressed crowd said in leaving the Prince's house at Madison, following the Prom concert of the Wisconsin Musical club Thursday evening. The concert by the joint Glee and Mandolin clubs—which appeared in this city on February 22—was the opening event of the 1916 Junior Prom Festivities.

A brilliant audience packed the opera house, and before the college men had been entertaining for many minutes the crowd had lost all its reserve that it brought to the theater, and men and women were applauding so vigorously for ensemble numbers, for soloists, for quartets, for specialties such as the famous Mendota crowsong—rowed as well as sung this year—that many a white glove was split.

There was as much enthusiasm in the audience as there was life on the stage, and as a result the performance was not over until 11 o'clock. It commenced at 8:25, ten minutes late because of the jam of carriages in front of the theater.

The program this year is entirely new, almost startlingly so, and everyone was delightfully surprised as the Many think her the most beautiful girl in moving pictures. She played the leading feminine role in "The Battle Cry of Peace," and appeared in many other stirring dramas.

She has agreed to offer her heart, hand and salary to the handsomest man in America—when he is found. It sounds very rash, doesn't it? But you should read the specifications. The president of the club, Wallace Meyer, designed the program. He stated after the Prom concert that he would condense the second half slightly, so that unless the local people insist upon too many encores, the concert may be finished in two hours and ten minutes.

A NOVEL

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Copyright by The Century Co.

Lansing, Wayne and Elton were heavy drinkers in town, but it was a tradition, as Alix knew, that on Red Hill they dropped it—all but the old captain. It was as though, amid the scenes of their childhood, they became children and just as a Frenchman of the old school will not light a cigarette in the presence of his father, so they would not take a drink for drink's sake on Red Hill.

So Alix looked on interestedly as the old butler set glasses and started the port. When it had gone the round Nance stood up, and with her hands on the table's edge, leaned toward them all. For a Wayne, she was very fair. As they looked at her the color swept over her bare neck. Its wave reached her temples and seemed to stir the clustering tendrils of her hair. Her eyes were grave and bright with moisture. Her lips were tremulous. "We drink to Alan," she said, "today is Alan's birthday."

She sat down. They all raised their glasses. Little Clem had no wine. She put a thin hand on Gerry's arm. "Please, Gerry, please!"

Gerry held down his glass. Clematis dipped in the tip of her little finger, and as they all drank, gravely carried the drop of wine to her lips.

CHAPTER III

As Judge Healey, gray-haired but erect, walked on the avenue his keen glance fell on Gerry Lansing standing across the street before an art dealer's window. Gerry's eyes were fastened on a picture that he had long had in mind for a certain nook in the library of the town house.

It was the second anniversary of his wedding, and though it was already late in the afternoon Gerry had not yet chosen his gift for Alix. He turned from the picture with a last long look and a shrug and passed on to a palatial jeweler's farther up the street.

For many years Judge Healey had been foster-father to Red Hill in general and to Gerry in particular. With almost womanly intuition he read what was in Gerry's mind before the picture and acting on impulse the judge crossed the street and bought it. While the judge was still in the picture shop Gerry came out of the jeweler's and started briskly for home. He had purchased a pendant of brilliant, extravagant for his purse but yet saved to good taste by a simple originality in design.

He waited until the dinner hour and then shipped his gift into Alix's hand as they walked down the stairs together. She stopped beneath the hall light. "I can't wait, dear, I simply can't." She snatched open the case. "Oh! she gasped. "How dear! How perfectly dear! You old sweetheart!" She threw her arms around his neck and kissed him twice. Then she flew away to the drawing room in search of Mrs. Lansing and the judge, the sole guests to the little anniversary dinner. Gerry straightened his tie and followed.

Alix tongue was rippling—her whole body was rippling—with excitement and pleasure. She dangled her treasure before their eyes. She laid it against her warm neck and ran to a mirror. The light in her eyes matched the light in the stones. The judge took the jewel and laid it in the palm of his strong hand. It looked in danger of being crushed. "A beautiful thing, Gerry," he said, "and well chosen. Some poet jeweler dreamed that twining design and set the stones, while the dew was still on the grass."

After dinner the four gathered in the library, but they were hardly seated when Alix sprang up. Her glance had followed Gerry's startled gaze. He was staring at the coveted picture he had been looking at in the gallery that afternoon. It hung in the niche in which his thoughts had placed it. Alix took her stand before it. She glanced inquiringly at the others. Mrs.

Lansing nodded at the judge. "Alix turned back to the picture and gravely stole into her face. Then she faced the judge with a smile.

"We live," she said, "in a Philistine age, don't we? But I've never let any Philistinism drive pictures from their right place in the heart. Pictures in art galleries—she shrugged her pretty shoulders—"I have not been trained up to them. To me, they are mounted butterflies in a museum, cut flowers crowded at the florist's. But this picture and that nook—they have waited for each other. You see the picture nestling down for a long rest and it seems a small thing and then it catches your eye and holds it and you see that it is a little door that opens on a wide world. It has slipped into the room and become a part of life."

A strange stillness followed on Alix's words. To the judge and to Gerry it was as though the picture had opened a window to her mind. Then she closed the window. "Come, Gerry," she said, turning. "Make your bow to the judge and back."

Gerry was excited, though he did not show it. "You have dressed my thoughts in words I can't equal," he said and strolled out to the little veranda at the back of the house. He wanted to be alone for a moment and think over this flash of light that had followed a dark day. For the first time in a long while Alix had revealed herself. He did not begrudge the judge his triumph. He knew instinctively that coming from him instead of from the judge the picture would not have struck that lightning spark.

The next day Gerry gave his consent to Alix's plan for a flying trip abroad, but with a reservation. The reservation was that she should join some party and leave him behind.

Judge Healey heard of this arrangement only when it was on the point of being put into effect. In fact he was only just in time at the steamer to wave good-by to Alix. Leaning over the rail, with her high color, moist red lips and big excited eyes making play under a golden crown of hair and over a huge armful of roses, Alix presented a picture not easily forgotten.

The judge turned to Gerry. "She ought not to be going without you, my boy."

"Oh, it's all right," said Gerry lightly. "She's well chaperoned. It's a big party, you know."

But during the weeks that followed the judge saw it was not all right. Gerry had less and less time for golf and more and more for whist and sodas. The judge was troubled and felt a sort of relief when from far away Alan Wayne cropped into his affairs and gave him something else to think about.

SCHOOL TEACHER

Wards Off Nervous Break Down. Alburdis, Pa.—"I am a teacher in the public schools and I got into a very nervous run-down condition. I could not sleep and had no appetite. I was tired all the time. My sister asked me to try Vinol. I did so, and within a week my appetite improved and I could sleep all night and now I feel well and strong."—Rose M. Keller, Alburdis, Pa. "We guaranteed Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, for all weakened run-down conditions and for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis."—Smith Drug Co., Janesville, Wis.

When Angus McDale of McDale and McDale called without appointment the judge knew at once that he was going to hear something about Alan. "Lucky to find you in," puffed McDale. "It isn't business exactly or I'd have phoned. I was just passing by."

"Well, what is it?" asked the judge, offering his visitor a fresh cigar.

"It's this. That boy, Alan Wayne—sort of protégé of yours, isn't he?"

"Yes—in a way—yes," said the judge slowly, frowning. "What has Alan done now?"

"It's like this," said McDale. "Six months ago we sent Mr. Wayne out on contract as assistant to Walton. Walton no sooner got on the ground than he fell sick. He put Wayne in charge and then he died. Now this is the point. Mr. Wayne seems to have promoted himself to Walton's pay. He had the cheek to draw his own as well. He won't be here for weeks but his accounts came in today. I want to know if you see any reason why we shouldn't have that money back, to say the least."

The judge's face cleared. "Didn't he tell you why he drew Walton's pay?"

"Not a word. Said he'd explain accounts when he got here but that sort of thing takes a lot of explaining."

"Well," said the judge, "I can tell you. Walton's pay went to his widow through me. I've been doing some puzzling on this case already. Now will you tell me how Alan got the money without drawing on you?"

"Oh, there was plenty of money lying around. The job cost ten per cent less than Walton's estimate. If he'd come back we'd have hauled him over the coals for the blunder. There was the usual reserve for work in inaccessible regions and then the people we did the job for paid ten days bonus for finishing that much ahead of contract time."

The judge mused. "Was the job satisfactory to the people out there?" he asked.

"Yes, it was," said McDale bluntly. "Most satisfactory. But there was a funny thing there too. They wrote that while they did not approve of Mr. Wayne's time-saving methods, the finished work had their absolute acceptance."

The judge was silent for a moment. "You want my advice?"

"Yes, not for our own sake but for Wayne's."

"Well," said the judge, "I'm going to give it to you for your sake. When you stumble across a boy that can cut ten per cent off the working and time estimates of an old hand like Walton, you bid him to you with a long contract at any salary he wants. And just one thing more: when Alan Wayne steals a cent from you or fifty thousand dollars you come to me and I'll pay it."

McDale's eyes narrowed and he puffed nervously at his cigar. He set up to take his leave. "Judge," he said, "your head is on right and your heart's in the right place, as well. I began to see that widow business. Wayne sized us up for a hard-headed firm when it comes to paying out what we don't have to and we are. It wasn't law, but he was right. Walton's work was done just as if he'd been alive. Even a Scotchman can see that. You needn't worry. A man that you'll back for fifty thousand is good enough for McDale & McDale."

CHAPTER IV

It was Alix that discovered Alan as the Electric steamed slowly down the Solent. He was already comfortably established in his chair with a small pile of fiction beside him.

She paused before she approached him. Alan had always interested her. Alix had thought of him heretofore as a modern exquisite subject to atavistic fits that, in times past, had led him into more than one barbarous escapade. Now in London she had by chance heard things of him that forced her to readjustment of her estimate. In six months Alan had turned himself into a mystery.

"Well," she said, coming up behind him, "how are you?"

Alan turned his head slowly and then threw off his rugs and sprang to his feet.

"The sky is clear," he said, "where did you drop from?" His eyes measured her. She was ravishing in a fur toque and coat which had yet to receive their baptism of import duty.

"Oh," said Alix, "my presence is a burden. Just the usual returning from six weeks abroad. But you? You come from the haunts of wild beasts and from all accounts you have been one."

"Been one! From all accounts!" exclaimed Alan, a puzzled frown on his face.

Face. "Just what do you mean?"

They started walking. "I meant that even in Africa one can't hide from Piccadilly. In Piccadilly you are already known. Not as Mr. Alan Wayne, a New York social satellite, but as a whirlwind in shirt sleeves. Ten Percent Wayne, in short." She looked at him with teasing archness. She could see that he was worried.

"Satellite is rather rough," remarked Alan. "I never was that."

"All bachelors are satellites in the nature of things—satellites to other men's wives."

"Have you a vacancy?" said Alan.

They both knew they were embarking upon a dangerous game, but Alix played it often. No pretty woman takes her European degree without ample occasion for practice and Alix had been through the European mill. She threw out her daintily shod feet as she walked. She was full of life. She felt like skipping. The light of battle danced merrily in her eyes. She made no other reply.

"I met lots of people we both know," she said, at last.

"Which one of them passed on the news that I had taken to the ways of a wild beast?"

"Oh, that was the Honorable Percy. I only caught a few words. He was telling about a man known as Ten Percent Wayne and the only time he'd ever seen the shirt-sleeve policy work with natives. When I learned it was Africa, I linked up with you at once and screamed and he turned to me and said, 'You know Mr. Wayne?' But just then Lady Merle signaled the retreat, and when the men came out somebody else snuffed Colingford before I got a chance."

"Oh, Colingford," said Alan. "I remember." He frowned and was silent.

"Alan," said Alix after a moment. "let me warn you. I see a new tendency in you but before it goes any further than a tendency let me tell you that a thoughtful man is a most awful bore. When I caught sight of you I thought, 'What a delightful little party, but if you're going to be as tedious as he is—'

Alan glanced at her. "Alix," he said, mimicking her tone, "I see in the markings of an altogether charming woman. I'm not speaking of the pulchritudine viceroy—I suppose you need that in your walk of life—but what's under it. There may be others, as you say. Pretty women have taken to wearing men for bangles. But don't you make a mistake. I'm not a bangle. I've just come from the unlovely world of real things. To me a man is just a man and what's more, a woman is just a woman."

Dinner Stories

King George was once enjoying the hospitality of a prominent peer at his country seat near the scene of one of Cromwell's historic battles. Strolling out one day by himself, the king met the village blacksmith returning from a shoeing expedition.

"I say, my good fellow," said his majesty, "I understand there was a big battle fought somewhere about here."

"Well—er," stammered the blacksmith, recognizing and saluting the king, "did have a round or two with Bill, the postman, but I didn't know your majesty had heard of it."

Just as a trolley car in Dorchester started two women rushed from opposite sides of the road to meet and greet each other right in the middle of the street.

There they settled down to a long chat and, of course, the car stopped. They talked and talked, and the car waited their pleasure. Presently the passengers began to make sarcastic remarks.

Then the motorman stepped into the breach. Leaning out from the vestibule he said in the gentlest of tones: "Pardon me, ladies, but may the conductor and I bring you a couple of chairs?"

"Well, if that isn't the limit," mused the postman as he came down the steps of a private residence in New York.

"What's the trouble?" queried the mere citizen who had overheard the postman's noisy thought.

Why, explained the man in gray, "the woman in that house says if I don't come along earlier she'll get her letters from some other carrier."

Robustness. "Father," said the small boy, "what a hypochondriac?"

"A hypochondriac, my son, is a person whose constitution is so strong that he can stand any amount of worry about his health."—Washington Star.

—W. MRS. EVA LEONARD—

"Why, how do you do, Jacob?" The tone was stern and accusatory. "You are late!"

"Yes, Marian was like that," he agreed. "No man could feel that way with Marian for a wife. How she could pour the courage she held up a man's hands whatever happened."

"Of course she would. That's what women are for, to bolster men up in hours of gloom and keep them from toppling over when they are hard hit. Men get the credit for doing things, but it has been my private belief that few of them ever made any great success without a woman to ease up the strain, or put on the brakes; in short, to keep the machine up to its capacity. That's what women are for."

"So when I see a man all frayed at the ends I think, 'Some woman isn't on his job.'"

"I am feeling better than I have in a long time," he said. "I thought possible Tuesday night, and as to not being fast colors, I am rather relieved to find the color has washed out somewhat. My husband was indeed, wanted not to fade." Jacob laughed.

"What is this about being blue? You should be getting younger and gay every day. You will have to keep pace with that handsome young wife of yours." Madam Morton peered at him over her glasses.

"I am out of the race. You see, I begin to realize what most folks were aware of years ago, that I am growing old. I never admit it, even to yourself. You were a mere boy when I married and I am not old. You are not well just now, and have lost your grip. The old lady was marching down the street as erect as a telegraph pole, but there was a hopeless droop in Jacob's shoulders."

"It is all a matter of the quality of your thoughts. If they are black, there, why, you're old if you have only seen twenty summers," continued Mrs. Morton, as Jacob did not reply.

"I guess that is about it. I've lost interest and hope," repeated Jacob.

"I am glad Marian can't hear you say that. She would be ashamed of

WHEN THE DOCTOR LAUGHS.

The doctor who laughs is a criminal and a godsend. His good humor is poisonous to some natures; uplifting to others. It all depends upon the occasion. There is a place for every thing. Take yourself, for instance. We are feeble attempts to inject a smile and then some of our readers bitterly resent the unbridled character of our remarks, and others don't know who don't write us, but who do write the editor, that a physician in practice should resort to his laughter for appropriate occasions. If a patient consults him about some trouble which seems trivial or imaginary, let him preserve a serious mien and examine that patient so thoroughly that nothing can escape his searching eyes, ears and hands. Then, if the trouble proves unfounded, let him laugh with the patient. That is where the doctor's laugh is good medicine. But if the doctor sits in his swivel chair and just divides the nature of the complaint, and the attempts to laugh it away, that laughter is bad and the doctor is a good one to keep away from.

The sneers by divination is altogether too popular with some practitioners. The competent physician properly places great value upon a careful history and the patient's verbal description of his trouble, but he never attempts to corroborate or disprove any tentative conclusion he may have reached, and of course that means a careful examination. No one knows better than the skilled physician himself the utter futility of subjective symptoms, uncontrolled by objective tests. As we have repeatedly observed in this column, there are some ninety odd different conditions which, in the patient's complaint, are "stomach trouble," and the majority of them being caused by troubles in no way related with the stomach.

Laughing at the patient without first winning the patient's confidence is a ruinous habit.

Laughing with the patient after having proved the fears unfounded is excellent medicine.

The quick never laughs—until the victor has departed.

The doctor who laughs means well. Let him be careful how he employs such a powerful remedy.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ask an Old Woman's Advice.

Some time ago I had an ulcerated tooth. I was on my way to the dentist and he told me it was dangerous to have it pulled before the swelling subsided. So I went home and poulticed it. After several days of now have a horrible scar, and it won't close completely either.

Answer:—A lot of people have taken foolish advice, and suffered for weeks. Immediate extraction of the tooth is the only remedy for an ulcerated tooth. Puncturing invites external perforation.

Obstructed Tear Duct.

What is a good eye wash for a child whose eyes are often outdoors?

Answer:—Use no eye wash. Have the child examined by the doctor. The tear duct draining tears into the nasal passage may be obstructed or inflamed.

HER HUSBAND'S FRIENDS.

Do you ever praise your husband's friends? You, in this case, means wives, of course, but as all women are potential if not actual wives, the hope no woman will lay this article aside merely because she isn't at present or the matrimonial estate, as for the men—well, I know all husbands will pick up their ears when they read that question, and how low don't matter.

The great commonplace which the average American husband shows in permitting his wife to select the friends with whom they shall spend most of their leisure time, and in enjoining and association with his family rather than his, is something I have remarked upon before. I think it exists partly because in this country (I believe the opposite is true abroad) the ties between a man and his family are stronger, and also because the American business man is so absorbed in his business that he leaves the arranging of all social relationships to his wife.

And this is the reward he gets.

But one aspect of this matter I do not either like or understand, and that is the antagonism the average wife seems to feel for her husband's masculine bachelor friends. Surely his companionship deserves some better return. And yet how many otherwise kind, thoughtful, unselfish women who reward their husbands' companionship in entertaining and associating with their friends by re-

CUT THE CON.

If you're a loyal member of the old Wind Jammer Clan, you better change your tactics, cut the con and be a man. You'll find that people as a rule are not so hot air stuff. It's up to you to cut the con. The backwoods guy is most extant and suckers' bout as few. As healthy oysters hidden in a hotel oyster stew. The public now has come across with Alberts freighted strong. On how to dope the proper line on chatter that is wrong. Get wise at once and cut the con. Be honest, true and fair. And folks will soon begin to know that you are on the square. The sledding will not be so hard, when people know you're right. You'll gain their confidence and help and stage a winning fight. There's nothing stands so solid, nothing pays so well today. As being on the level in the things you do and say. For people know your motives. You reflect the thoughts you think. And if you're not four square and right, they'll put you on the blink. So get the hunch and cut the con, let folks know where you're at. And watch success come skidding through red hot right off the bat.

BREADS.

White Bread.—In the evening dissolve half cake compressed yeast in a little warm water. Mash three medium-sized boiled potatoes, add about one-fourth cup sugar and a heaping tablespoon of flour. Pour on just enough boiling water to scald the yeast, mix with potatoes, then add enough more water to make about 1½ quarts. When lukewarm, add the dissolved yeast cake and let stand over night in warm place. (It is best to make potatoes with a ricer or strain the whole, before adding the yeast, as this takes out all the little lumps and makes the bread finer.) In the morning the yeast should be foamy and ready to sponge. Add as much flour as can be beaten in with a spoon, and stand in warm place to rise. When light, add tablespoon of lard and pinch of salt. Knead quite stiff, adding as much flour as is required. Let rise again. Then mold into loaves, let rise to double size and bake.

To make loaves with bread dough: When ready to put bread into loaves, save out a small piece of dough and work in a little more shortening and sugar. Roll out to desired thickness and let rise. When ready, add some thick light brown sugar and cinnamon. Bake about twenty minutes. (This is delicious.)

White Bread with Raisins.—One pint whole meal, one-half cup raisins, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup soda, one teaspoon cream of tartar, milk enough to make soft batter. Mix in order given and bake in cake pan thirty minutes.

Cream Cake

Inquiries among a large number of women using "The Cook's Book" showed this to be their favorite cake recipe. It is easy to make, certain to turn out well if K C Baking Powder is used, and may be put together with almost any filling or icing.

K C Cream Cake

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

One-half cup butter; 1 cup sugar; yolks of 2 eggs; 1 cup milk; 1 cup sifted flour; 1 level teaspoonful K C Baking Powder; 1 cup cold water; whites of 2 eggs, beaten dry.

Cream the butter; add the sugar, yolks of eggs and water; then the flour, sifted three times with the baking powder, lastly the whites of eggs. Bake in two or three layers; put these together with cream filling, and dredge the top with confectioner's sugar.

One-fourth cup sifted flour; 1 teaspoonful salt; 1 cup hot milk; 1 egg, beaten light; 1 cup sugar; 1 teaspoonful vanilla extract; 1 ounce chocolate.

Mix flour and salt with a very little cold milk; stir into the hot milk and cook ten minutes; add the chocolate and stir until it is melted and evenly blended with the flour mixture, then beat in the egg mixed with the sugar, and lastly the vanilla.

You need the K C Cook's Book, containing this and other delicious recipes—sent free upon receipt of colored certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder. Send to the James Mfg. Co., Chicago.

Gazette Advertising Brought Pleasant Surprise

C. E. Roby of Milton Junction found that the success of his auction was due to the advertising he did in the Gazette. He says below that if it had not been for the advertising his stock would not have sold so well.

If you are Questioning the Wisdom of Using Gazette Advertising for Your Auction, Read This Letter

Janesville Gazette, Janesville, Wis.

Milton Jct., Feb. 12, 1916.

Gentlemen:—Before my sale I was afraid that my horses would not bring me very much. I had some good stock which I did not like to see go cheap but I knew when the sale started they would have to go.

I turned to the Gazette to help me out and placed three ads in the paper. What was my surprise when my horses sold for the highest prices that have been paid this season anywhere. The buyers were strangers and when I talked to them I found that none of them had seen a bill. They had read my ad in the Gazette and the advertising brought them to the sale. They came from all over this part of the state and I think this is pretty good evidence that it pays well to advertise an auction in the Gazette.

My bills, I only had a hundred, were all placed near my home and it had not been for the paper my stock would have sold for a fraction of their worth.

I want to thank the Gazette for the business it brought me.

Yours truly,

C. E. ROBY.

THE WOMEN'S COUNCIL

"Let Us Meet and Counsel Together"

WOMEN'S HELP.

There is no problem upon which an intelligent woman cannot throw some new light. In neglecting women's help, men are blundering not merely by what they do, but still more badly in what they do not do in the terribly important provinces of life which they leave untouched by legislation. We men require women's help as much for our sakes as for women's sakes. Israel Zangwill.

CLUB HOME GIFT TO PORTLAND, MAINE

What is considered one of the most gratifying features of the work of the Women's Literary Union for some time past, the presentation by George C. Frye of a colonial house, to be used as a club home by the Women's Literary Union of Portland, Me., the gift having been made by this organization without encumbrances of any kind. The lot of land with the house is large enough to allow for an auditorium which will seat about 100 persons and will probably be started in May, as the club women will take possession at that time.

In their work the members of the Women's Literary Union take up biology, literature, art and music, also education, including forestry, and the members have at the same time worked side by side with other organizations in Portland in the interest of playgrounds and other activities which make for the welfare of a community. It was largely owing to the efforts of the Women's Literary Union that the city of Portland now carries on in connection with the work of the public schools of Portland was established. They were also active in the movement to promote school forestry, and the school was inaugurated there several years ago. Moreover, its interest in the public schools has led to members of the Women's Literary Union to offer prizes for essays on forestry, and the vocational training as a subject for discussion, and to investigate modern educational methods along many lines. The organization has made a place for itself in the community and through the systematic management and careful planning of the executive officers and the board of directors, many instructive lectures and social programs have been given. The leaders of the organization have been women with high ideals.

It was about twenty years ago that several of the union's prominent members felt the need of a club home, and at that time a sum of a few hundred dollars was raised. The money remained in the bank little having been added to it until the year 1914, when a small number of women took the initiative a campaign which gave so much of an impetus to the clubhouse idea that an active club-house committee was organized. Percival B. Howe was chairman, and followed not a little progress was made, the gift of Mr. Frye supplementing their efforts in the meantime.

The house which has been presented by Mr. Frye is of brick, and is a fine type of colonial architecture. The gift to the Portland club women is the result of the work of public benefactors which have enriched the civic life of Portland and which include the L. D. M. Sweet memorial building, the home of the Portland Society of Art, the public library, which was the gift of James P. Baxter, the municipal organ in the city hall auditorium, presented by Cyrus H. Curtis, the beautiful park which is the result of the cooperation with other gratuities which might be mentioned as substantial testimonials of the regard which Portland's sons and daughters are wont to hold their city and as for the club women, their effort cannot fail to carry the work to completion in due time.

A special meeting of the board of directors of the Women's Literary Union is to be called for the purpose of this meeting plans for the new building will be discussed, for while the funds on hand do not warrant immediate action in this direction, it is felt by those in charge that the club effort cannot fail to carry the work to completion in due time.

W. C. T. U. INSTITUTE.
The second group institute of Rock county W. C. T. U. composed of five unions of the northern half of the county, was held at Milton, Me., on Friday, February 10th, afternoon and evening. It was well attended by representatives of the Milton, Milton Junction, Evansville, Lima and Harmony unions and visitors from the other four county unions. At 11 a. m. a meeting of the board was held, at which a fine picnic dinner, instituted by County President Mrs. Lucy Dickinson who presided very gracefully at the sessions. Devotions were led by Mrs. Betts of Milton, after which business was transacted. Treasurer's report showed a nice balance in the treasury.

Joe E. Sizer gave an instructive drill on how to use the state minutes and made an impressive plea for the members of the W. C. T. U. to familiarize themselves more with the minutes, and do more by a fine solo by Mrs. Lillian Hummel. Mrs. Scott Hatch gave a good paper on "How Spots My White Ribbon to My Neighbor," which emphasized the importance of wearing the white ribbon emblem of temperance and purity at all times and show to the world her loyalty to the cause.

Miss R. A. Gillaspie favored the institute with a fine solo. "I Told Him the Old Story." The afternoon session closed with song, Wisconsin Shall Be Free, and "America." Benediction.

In the evening Mrs. J. E. Sizer addressed a fair sized audience with her lecture, "Our Duty as Citizens." All felt that it was a day well-spent and good had been done.

This club held their regular meeting at the city hall on Monday, February 14th. Mrs. Percy Munger presiding. In the absence of Miss Gertrude Cobb, who is to be out of the city for pointed secretary of the meeting. After the regular business of the meeting, the question of the celebration of baby week came up. Motions were made and carried to ask the ministers to mention the baby week movement, and if inclined to have the movement along that line, for the Sunday, March 19th which is the day opening the baby week.

Special window displays during that week of articles used by babies. Toys, furniture and baby clothing and baby carriages and anything to make babies comfortable and happy are especially appropriate.

The chairman stated that a program was being prepared for Friday, March 10, the Summer club which is to be held March 8 and 9 at the city hall. Mrs. Dr. Mendenhall of Madison has been secured for the afternoon program March 10 and possibly an evening meeting will also be arranged. Mrs. Mendenhall is an expert on care of babies and child welfare.

She has taken special training along that line of work and for some time was assistant to Dr. Bell who is at the head of a Child hospital and has published several books which are authorities on that subject. She afterwards married and came to Madison to be the wife of a physician, and with the need of the work that she fills few engagements on the extension department of the University. Janesville is very fortunate in being able to secure Mrs. Mendenhall for this occasion.

REST ROOM IN SOUTHERN CITY

It is a well known fact that old residents of the city remember the journey here with kindly memories. Mr. E. M. Hardy, who was in the newspaper business in this city some thirty years ago, sends copies of "The Sun," published at Watertown, Tenn., of which he is the editor. It is a little city of less than 5,000 people, but the following clipping shows that it is divided up to date. After describing the operation of a new store with its various departments and its third floor fitted up as a beauty parlor and dressmaking shop, it goes on to describe its "rest room," as follows:

"Perhaps the improvement which will be most appreciated by the public at large is the 'rest room' being added to the building above the first floor. The club women of the city, mindful of the old town shopkeepers and provide a maid. A piano and a soda fountain will be included in the equipment furnished by Messrs. Bros. Special provision will be made for a section of the room where committee meetings may be held.

BABY WEEK.

The name Baby Week is a diplomatic expedient. Of course it would never do in the world to call it a better parents' week. Already we have had that mothers' congresses are run by men and so are called a better mothers' week. And a better fathers' week would seem to imply that the masculine progenitor had fled in dismay. So whenever we go about reforming we have to go about the subject with tact and diplomacy. Hence the name, Baby Week. Anyhow father has something else to do besides pay the bills and change the clothes, besides demonstrating emotional love.

They must declare efficiency, and bring up the right sort of babies to belong to the state.

SEWING CLUBS

With spring coming on, with all kinds of sewing to be done, we are getting together with some congenial neighbors and form a class of the vocational school, held in your nearest school building. You can join at any time and have expert instruction and help on whatever kind of work you choose—blouses, frocks, children's clothes—any line of sewing you may have on hand to do. I think you will find it a most interesting and profitable while and let its advantages slip by.

ON THE PRESIDENTIAL TOUR

When the president and Mrs. Wilson stopped at Kenosha recently, Miss Harrison, Bain, president of the Kenosha County Equal Suffrage league, and Miss Emma Robinson, the secretary, were in the crowd. The train drew in and President Wilson appeared on the platform for a brief talk. Miss Robinson handed with a big white sash, bearing the legend,

"Kenosha Suffrage Snaps for the First Lady of the Land." The president himself took the box, thanked the ladies and passed it on to Mrs. Wilson. Miss Bain handed in two notes, one for the president and one for Senator Paul Hastings. These the president received and handed to his secretary.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF THE Y. M. C. A.

The house committee of this organization has been fully recruited as to members, and they are preparing for definite work along their line. Though a good deal has been accomplished in the way of renovation of the building, the walls having been tinted and many of the dormitories refurnished, still much remains to be taken in hand and made more homelike. Ward robes or clothes closets have never been installed and are quite badly needed in the rooms, and more of the dormitories should be taken in hand and made more homelike. It is the purpose of the house committee, and under the new chairman—Mrs. A. C. Hough—they are going vigorously to try and raise money for the project.

Their first venture is to be a matinee under their auspices, to be given at the Apollo theatre on Friday, Feb. 18, at 2:30 p. m. The appearance of the Girls' Glee Club of Beloit, who will give a concert and entertainment. WORKED 26 YEARS A MOTORMAN AT DAYTON

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Dayton, O., Feb. 16.—(The Gazette) Dayton, Ohio, completed his 26th year as a motorman on the Dayton city line. This is a record for continuous service by an Ohio motorman. It is estimated that if all Cuyahoga's trips were put in one stretch, he would now be approaching Dayton on his fortieth trip around the world. It is figured that to date Cuyahoga has traveled 599,654 miles. During the 26 years he has been late to work twice and was laid off once for running ahead of time. He was reprimanded once for bumping another car. Otherwise his record is 100% efficient.

Milton Junction News

Milton Junction, Feb. 16.—Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Thorpe entertained the Twentieth Century club at Somers-Set last evening. A two course luncheon was served.

The eighth grade and freshman class of the local school spent a pleasant evening at the Shirley Ada home on that night and a vast influence is exerted upon the variety of the species of the plants, the different individuals of which are influenced accordingly.

When a sufficient supply of potassium is afforded the plant, sugars and starches are produced in greater quantity, the plant moves on normally to maturity; the formation of its flowers, and subsequently of its seeds, follows naturally.

The composition of the soil determines largely the character of the development of the plants growing upon that soil and a vast influence is exerted upon the variety of the species of the plants, the different individuals of which are influenced accordingly.

In the same way exactly the composition of the food of man determines largely the character of the development of himself and his children and exercises the same vast influence upon the physical characteristics of his offspring.

It has been conclusively established that in the absence of the efficiency of particular food minerals others may be absorbed in proportions very different from those which would have been found had the missing minerals been present.

This is one of the most alarming arguments against the manipulation of these minerals whereby some are removed entirely and others appear in proportions altogether out of harmony with nature's formula.

We do not know in what manner certain minerals are deposited in the arteries, but we do know that the hardening of the arteries which is the harbinger of old age. A man may be old at twenty-five or young at sixty, depending upon the condition of his arteries.

There is much reason to believe that man's disregard of the meaning and significance of the natural proportions of food minerals, just as they are elaborated by Mother Nature, is also responsible for the abnormal growth of many organs and glands, such, for instance, as the growth of morbid cells found in all tumors and cancers.

We have seen that a handful of fertile earth, a handful of wheat, a measure of milk, and the body of man each contain sixteen mineral elements. We shall now look upon the relationship of these elements to life and see, if possible, what relationship exists between them and health or disease.

The blood, the gastric juice, the pancreatic juice, the saliva, the bile, and the other internal secretions of the body are composed, among other things, of mineral salts in solution.

We need only glance over the following analyses made many years ago, but today as true as when they first came from the laboratory, in order to see how these internal secretions contain a constant minimum of these elements.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

Extraordinary influence is exerted by soil minerals not only upon character of plant life, but also upon physical characteristics of man and his offspring.

Let us continue to examine the wonderful influence of the food minerals upon the growth of plants.

When a sufficient supply of potassium is afforded the plant, sugars and starches are produced in greater quantity, the plant moves on normally to maturity; the formation of its flowers, and subsequently of its seeds, follows naturally.

The composition of the soil determines largely the character of the development of the plants growing upon that soil and a vast influence is exerted upon the variety of the species of the plants, the different individuals of which are influenced accordingly.

In the same way exactly the composition of the food of man determines largely the character of the development of himself and his children and exercises the same vast influence upon the physical characteristics of his offspring.

It has been conclusively established that in the absence of the efficiency of particular food minerals others may be absorbed in proportions very different from those which would have been found had the missing minerals been present.

This is one of the most alarming arguments against the manipulation of these minerals whereby some are removed entirely and others appear in proportions altogether out of harmony with nature's formula.

In all of these analyses it must be remembered that the chemist has not determined the form under which, in their highly organized states, the various minerals found in the laboratory previously existed in the internal secretions of the living animal.

In reducing the organic mineral salts to their inorganic form, their form is completely changed, so that all we can say for the results of the analysis is that the minerals are really there, regardless of the proportions in which they are found by this or that investigator.

We must not assume because the chemist has calculated the iron of the red corpuscles as "iron oxide" that it would be a good thing to go to the drug store and buy some iron
